

Ryan Klopfer is a Cherokee County business owner and resident. He graduated from Life University in 2016 with a Doctorate of Chiropractic. He also obtained his Master's of Science in Sports Injury Management and went on to further his education in Chiropractic Orthospinology, a specialized spinal correction procedure. His practice, Ball Ground Upper Cervical Chiropractic, serves patients from all over the southeast region of the country. Their mission: To have the happiest and healthiest patients in the country who make the most well-informed health decisions.

Dr. Ryan is an active member of the Ball Ground Business Association. He is a active board member for The Society of Chiropractic Orthospinology where he is the advanced instructor and travels around the country teaching the Orthospinology procedure. In addition to his chiropractic education, he is currently studying Pain Neuroscience Education and is the only chiropractor in the state of Georgia who incorporates Pain Neuroscience Education into his treatment protocols.

As former D-1 football player, he's physically active and enjoys hiking, snowboarding, mountain biking and other outdoor activities. Dr. Ryan thoroughly enjoys traveling with family and friends as well as advancing his skillset in flatpicking on the guitar. In addition to his hobbies, he consistently studies economics, monetary policies, libertarianism, self-sovereign values and cryptocurrency technologies.